

samara day without say

What if young Canadians were stripped of their digital democracy? What if they couldn't comment or post their opinion about everything they see online?

We think they would have a renewed appreciation for their democracy. So let's team up with popular social pages of influencers and news/entertainment outlets, ask them to post politically charged content, and then turn off their post comments for a day.

Our partners would then remind young Canadians to value their democracy, and invite them to get involved in their political system by visiting www.samaracanada.com.

Comments are disabled for this video.